ASTAL
SUMMER INSTITUTE:
WRITING FOR YOUNG PEOPLE

Once again this summer the Alliance for the Study and Teaching of Adolescent Literature (ASTAL) at Rhode Island College is offering an institute for people who are interested in learning to write for young people or enhance their teaching of writing. Participants will write and interact for six days with award-winning authors who serve as their instructor/mentors. They will also attend presentations about book publishing featuring editors and publishers, and they will meet and hear from guest authors. The instructor/mentor to student ratio will not exceed 1:8 to provide maximum opportunities for individualized instruction and feedback during work sessions. Enrollment will be limited and students will be accepted in the order that we receive the applications.

When: June 23, 24, 25, 26, 28,
and 29, 2010

Where: Rhode Island College

Enrollment Fee:

Enrollees may elect to earn three graduate or undergraduate credits for their participation. Credit fees are $894 and noncredit fees are $750.

FOR WRITERS:

This Institute offers the unique opportunity to engage in writing activities that stimulate creative thinking and help you polish your craft. The one-on-one time with the published authors on the faculty of the Institute offers a wealth of feedback that will take your writing to the next level. A perfect mix of craft and business, these days will change the way you think about yourself as a writer.

FOR TEACHERS:

The Institute offers teachers the chance to engage in the work of real writers. You will walk away with fresh ideas for generating excitement for writing in the young authors in your classroom. When you begin to see yourself as a writer, you become a better teacher of writing.

This Institute can be taken for three credits and can be counted toward teaching goals or other professional development requirements.
